POLLUTION OF STREAMS MUST STOP

STATE DIRECTOR OF HEALTH O. K.'S SENATOR EDWARDS BILL

In the Ultimate Effect No Law You Have Now Before You is as Far Reaching Asserts Dr. Monger—Amendment is Suggested by James E. Bowman.

"In the ultimate effect no law you have now before you is as far reaching. It permits the establishment of a policy that will eventually solve the difficulty, great as it is, and at one stroke it limits the problem to its present dimensions."

James E. Bowman, also of the department of health explained the measure which was drafted under his supervision. He suggested an amendment to the original bill making private dwellings exempt from supervision.

Dr. Raymond Osborn, Ohio State university, and several other speakers advocated the measure's passage.

BASKETBALL NOTES.

Owing to the inclement weather on the night of last week's game, the audience was small and many of the club's regular patrons failed to see the home squad defeat a hitherto unbeaten team.

However, they will have an opportunity of seeing what promises to be another equally good game tonight, when the C. A. C. will be pitted against the Sabina Ind. team. Watch the floor tonight; note the clock-like precision with which the various plays are made and the skill displayed by guards and center as well as forwards in getting the ball away from the visitors.

This will be a good game. Come and help root for this bunch of youngsters who are rapidly becoming one of the best amateur basketball teams in southern Ohio.

Contrary to the history of past measures of this nature, not a single voice was raised in opposition to the Edwards bill which would put teeth in the stream pollution law, at a public hearing before joint senate and house committees in the senate chamber Tuesday night.

The measure was introduced by Senator John S. Edwards of Licking county. It would give greater regulatory powers to the state department of health in controlling stream pollution and would provide penalties for infractions. The state board would be authorized to approve all sewage disposal plants filtration systems and water systems. Infractions would be punishable by fines of from $100 to $500 for every 30 day period during which the board's orders were disobeyed.

"The past history of stream pollution legislation is epitomized in the one word—failure," declared Dr. J. E. Monger, state director of health, speaking for the bill, which he said would give broader and fairer powers to the department of which he is the head.

"In the past," said Dr. Monger "individual and organized effort has been checkmated by opposition of individual and organized effort, with the result that there has been a legislative stalemate. Certain powers have been given to the state department of health, but they are in no way adequate and were given for entirely different purposes."

Dr. Monger frequently attacked the "selfish interests" of lobbyists who opposed regulation of stream pollution. The thing some of these persons want, he said, is "to dump carbolic acid or other wastes in a water supply unrestrained."

"In the ultimate effect on humanity," asserted Dr. Monger, "there is not a bill in your bill book that will confer on future generations the benefit that this one will. In less than 20 years, 70 per cent of our population will be drinking surface water, every drop of which is either actually or potentially polluted."

Church Supper.

A pleasant social gathering and an excellent meal is promised those who take advantage of the opportunity to attend the supper to be given at St. Philip's church on next Wednesday evening by the ladies of the church guild. The ladies of St. Philip's are noted for the excellency of their culinary effects and those who partake of meals which they prepare can always feel assured in advance that they have a treat in store.

The menu for the supper next week has not been fully decided yet, but it is very probable that a baked ham supper with all the appropriate side dishes will be served.

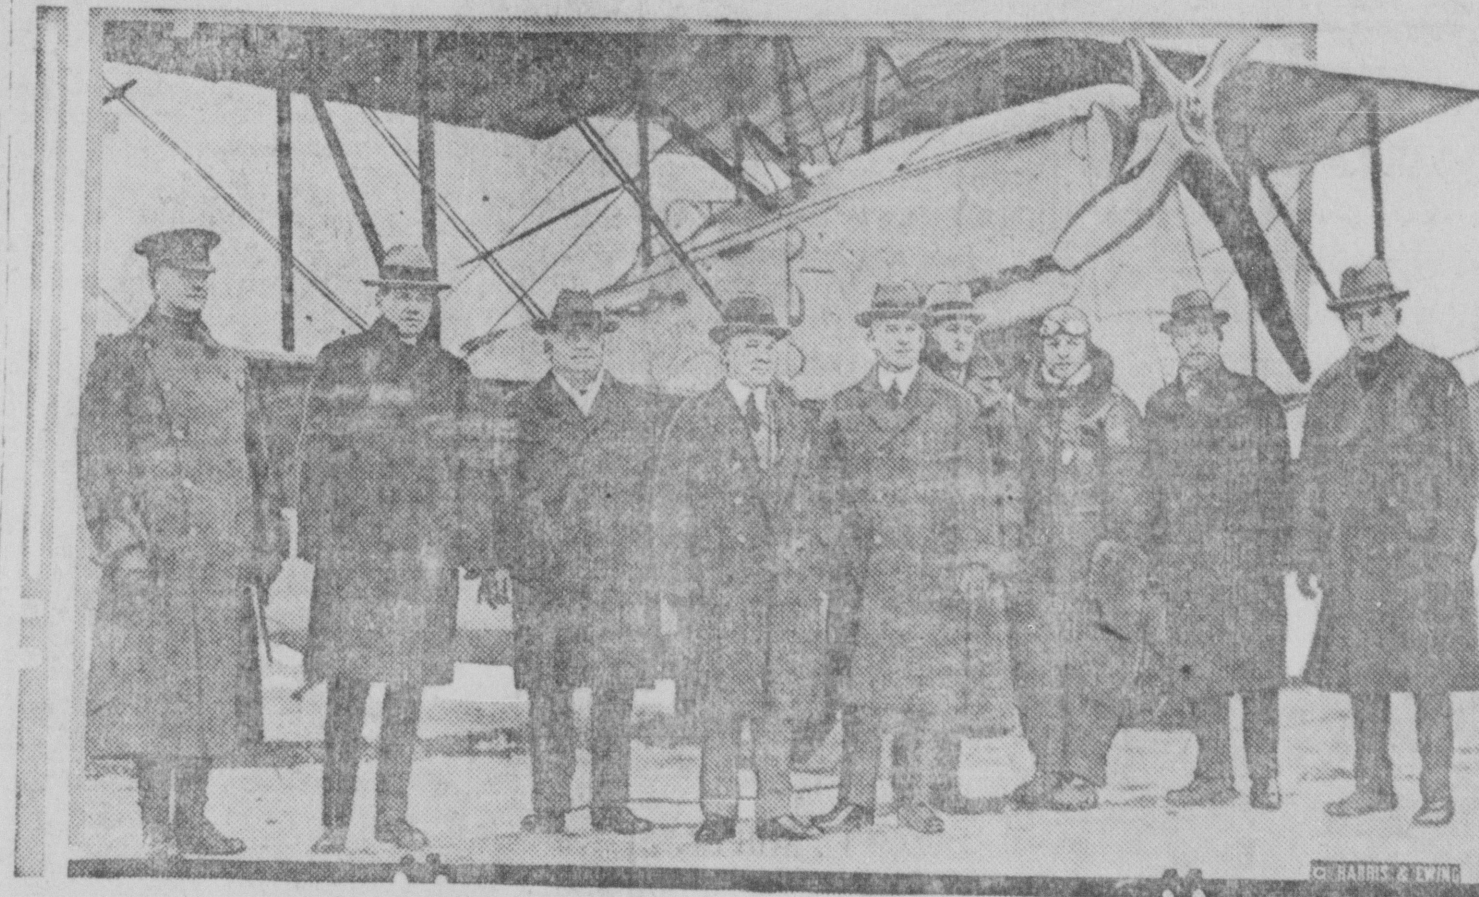

Additional information will be given before the date of the supper.

Reserve this date now, so that you will be free to spend an enjoyable evening at the Parsh house.

New Amphibian Airplane Viewed by Representatives

The new amphibian airplane, that is at home both on water and land as well as in the air, was inspected by a congressional committee at Bolling field. The machine was designed by Grover Loening of New York. Left to right in the group, standing before the new plane, are—Maj. H. B. Clagett, commander of Bolling field; Representatives Frank Reed, Florian Lampert, Randolph Perkins, A. S. Prall; Maj. Raycroft Walsh; Lieut. Wendell H. Brookley, who piloted the machine from New York to Washington; Mr. Loening, the designer, and Representative Roy O. Woodruff.

CHANGES WROUGHT BY POWER

Untried Uses of Electricity to Revolutionize Agriculture Aylesworth Predicts.

A revolution in farm power within a few years was forecast today by M. H. Aylesworth, managing director of the National Electric Light association in his address on "Rural Electrification," before a Farmers' week audience at the Ohio State university.

"Eventually electricity will do and accomplish a service on the farms which is an unknown quantity today," Mr. Aylesworth predicted. "Five hundred thousand farms in the United States are now more or less electrified. And while the advantages of electricity are well known to every farmer's wife, the great question involved is the development of electrical power on the farm to the end that the farmer may be relieved of inconvenience and of inefficient human labor."

"I pledge the electrical industry of Ohio and of the United States to an immediate program looking forward to the ultimate electrification of agriculture."

State and national committees seeking to speed rural electrification have been appointed. They will survey rural communities best adapted to electrification and then suggest a program of action. Electrical and agricultural engineers farm organization chiefs, and colleges are represented on these committees.

Indicating one way in which rural Ohio is already utilizing electrical energy, another Farmer's week speaker, C. W. Hammans, extension specialist in marketing at the state university, estimated that at least 50,000 Ohioans are using the market news service broadcast thrice daily by Station WEAQ at the university.

Mr. Hammans predicted that "the proper application of marketing by radio will have as great an influence continued on page four."

Files Suit For Damages

E. A. Allen has filed a civil action against Mary Stocklen, Thomas and Bernard Stocklen, doing business under the firm name of The Stocklen grocery in which he claims damage in the sum of $263.59 and interest from June 1, 1923. The plaintiff bases his claim for damages in a collision he had with his truck and the car of Miss Stocklen on the evening of June 1, 1923. The Allen car was driven by Robert E. Hunley on the night of the accident. The latter was just about to turn into Hayward off Court street when his car was hit or given a side swipe by Miss Stocklen's car, which was going south. George T. Lochtefeld, of Cincinnati, representing the Cosmopolitan Service company of Cincinnati, which carried risk on Mr. Allen's car is the attorney for plaintiff.

Suit for Money.

John D. Weaver has filed a civil action against Myrtle Mounjoy as executor of the estate of Charles Mounjoy, in which he claims there is due him the amount of $226.84 with interest on $200 from January 15, 1920 at 6 per cent. Charles Gerhardt and Barton Walters represents the plaintiff.

Man Bitten by Mosquito Gets Accident Award

San Francisco.—The state industrial accident commission recently decided that a mosquito bite on the tongue constituted an industrial hazard, and as such awarded William Miller, laborer, $2,487.13, with $12.23 a week until he recovers. Miller, who was bit on the tongue last June 10 at Van Sickle Island, near Pittsburg, Cal., has been unable to work since that time. His tongue became infected from the bite.

New England Thriftiest, Savings Reports Show

New York.—New England is the thriftiest section of the country, the Middle Atlantic group of states is its closest competitor and the South has made the greatest relative advance in savings, a report covering the last 12 years made public by the American Bankers' association reveals.

Per capita savings deposits in New England this year was $443; Middle Atlantic states, $305; Pacific, $240; East Central, 168; West Central, $87, and Southern, $52.

The South in the 12 years considered has advanced 188 per cent. Its per capita savings in 1912 was only $18.

The advance in other sections was: New England, from $245 to $443; Middle Atlantic, $151 to $305; Pacific, $101 to $240; East Central, $80 to $168, and the West Central, $40 to $87.

THE CAVE IS COLLINS' MAUSOLEUM

All Hopes of Saving Him Given Up—Rise in Floor of Cave Puts End to Rescue.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 5 (United Press)—Dead or alive Floyd Collins, 35, explorer, will be taken from Sand Cave where he has been imprisoned more than 140 hours.

Kentucky officially has pledged itself to bring him out. But even with the resources of his state and the federal government marshalled in his behalf Collins probably will perish.

The slimy, firgid tunnel thru which men burrowed toward the victim has swollen shut. The bulging mud is freezing. Roy Hyde, expert miner, returning from the last plunge into the depths, reeled into the open air to report:

"That's my last trip. I'd never come out alive if I tried it again. I couldn't even get my hand thru the opening that is left."

The only means of reaching Collins now would be thru a new shaft. This must be cut directly to the spot where Collins lies. Engineers have abandoned a plan to dig thru to the walls of a gigantic vault beyond Collins from the point they would have emerged if would have been necessary to scale a forty foot precipice, pitch the jaller boulder into the void and then carry (continued on page five)

FIVE STATE TRUSTIES IMPLICATED

In Distributing Liquor From State Welfare Department Garage.

Columbus, O. Feb. 5 (United Press) Charles R. Williams, Cincinnati and James Chatham, Toledo, Mansfield reformatory trustees, told their stories to Governor Donahey today, admitting the charges of being implicated in distributing bootleg liquor from the state welfare department garage.

The youths were questioned separately in Adjutant General Frank Henderson's office later.

They declare the three other trustees—Henty Kohnoff of Toledo, Joseph Schmitt of Cleveland and Ray Barford of Ashtabula, assigned to the garage, were implicated as much as they.

The youths were said to have dealt in the liquor in carload lots. According to their story, Roy Crimsley, formerly a mechanic at the garage, came to the garage with carloads of whisky and said someone was chasing him. The youths said they believed he had permission to use the garage for the purpose.

809 Bricks in Hour Laid on a Wager

London.—The latest world record claimed here is the laying of 800 bricks in an hour, or more than 13 a minute. The feat was performed by Christopher Hull, a foreman bricklayer of Sheffield, for a wager of £10.

Hull was allowed four laborers to wait upon him, but nevertheless the performance was regarded as a remarkable display of strength and skill. His achievement meets with no admiration among the trade unionists, however, and one of the union officials is quoted as saying: "The man's crazy and ought to be made to eat his bricks. A fair average is 400 an hour." The builders on the other hand say many men could lay 800 daily if they chose, but that the average is around 500. They have long complained of deliberate slowness since the war, which they claim is largely responsible for the housing shortage.

Helen May Martin of Geneva, Ill., is the only known deaf and blind person who learned to play the piano well. She has never heard a sound or seen a single object. Miss Martin has extraordinary talent, and has been pronounced the "most wonderful girl in the world" by Paderewski, for whom she has played.

Columbus, Feb. 5.—John Graham, 22, serving a life term in the Ohio penitentiary for a murder committed in Akron in 1920, was killed today in a spectacular attempt to escape.

Swinging along in midair on an electric wire Graham was making his way hand-over-hand from the roof of the main prison building to a telephone pole outside the prison wall.

Just before gaining the high wall his hold loosened on the wire to which he was clinging and he fell into the skull.

Death resulted from a fractured prison yard.

YOUNGEST MAN TO HEAD DEPARTMENT

For L. Hugo Keller of Wisconsin his friends claim the distinction of being the youngest department commander in the American Legion. Keller is just thirty years old.
Born in Appleton, Wis., Keller spent two years at the high school there and then put in four years at Campion college in preparation for a law course at Marquette university, Milwaukee. He received the degree of Bachelor of Laws in June, 1917, and was admitted to the bar two months later.
One month before his graduation, Keller volunteered his services for his country. In November, 1917, he was called to Fort Sheridan and commissioned a second lieutenant. He was at once sent overseas and was assigned to the One Hundred and Fiftieth machine gun battalion in February, 1918. He served with that outfit throughout the war and also in the army of occupation. In May, 1919, he returned home with the Rainbow division and was discharged.
Ever since the organization of the American Legion, Commander Keller has been active in its work. He was

He is very effective as a speaker on Legion subjects.

MODERN CRUSADERS

REV. E. J. EVANS, addressing American Legionnaires at Beloit, Wis., recently declared: "American Legionnaires are the modern crusaders for the right. It is wicked for a Christian nation to be neutral between right and wrong. Do these prattlers of 'peace-at-any-price' know or have they forgotten that the Christian religion itself would have been exterminated by the Mohammedans who invaded Europe had it not been for the military genius of Charles Martel and the sword of Sobleski? Your national commander, James A. Drain, advocates a principle of preparedness which is sound, sensible and just. He urges the enactment of a universal draft law which would place on all citizens an equal obligation in time of war—man power to fight, man power to work, factory power to produce and money power to finance. This is the best peace measure and the most practical preparedness measure ever suggested, and every loyal American will continue to advocate it until congress adopts it. I for one rejoice that Legionnaires know how to defend liberty and how to use it."

Must Use Married Name When Signing Pay Roll

Rehabilitation officers of the American Legion who have assisted the wives of disabled veterans to obtain positions in the United States veterans' bureau, Washington, state that such women will be compelled to use their married names when they sign the pay roll, or give up their jobs. Many married women of the thousands employed by the bureau have been carried on the pay roll under their maiden names. In making the ruling, Director Frank T. Hines of the veterans' bureau pointed out that the law presumes that the name of a woman is changed, on contracting the marriage relation, to that of her husband, which thereafter becomes her only legal name.

Urged to Join Legion

Members of Washington labor organizations who saw service in the World war were recently urged to join the American Legion in a letter sent to the secretary of each union by William Short, president of the Washington State Federation of Labor. The letter from Mr. Short followed announcement of plans for a membership drive to be conducted by Rainier Noble post of the Legion, the largest organization of veterans in the state.

Only Man and Cat Sing
A fact that is not generally realized is that, except for birds, the only creatures that sing are man and the cat. The cat's purr is a primitive song and its voice works very much in the same way as that of human beings. A cat's vocal cords are more like those of man than those of any other animal, although they are only capable of producing a single note.

Flowers for Perfumes
At the present time the principal flowers utilized for perfumery are roses, violets, jonquils, narcissis, jasmine, almond blossoms, cassia, heliotrope and geraniums. KEEPING WELL
FIGHTING DISEASE IN THE DARK
DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

FOOT-AND-MOUTH disease has appeared among the "Brahman" cattle of Texas. This is a strange instance of jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, as far as the Texas cattle men are concerned.

Many years ago, when Texas stockmen were suffering great losses through their cattle dying of Texas fever, it was proposed to import from India the zebu or humped oxen of that country, which, for some reason, are immune to the fever which prevailed in Texas. Many of these strange cattle were brought in, and in some ways the experiment has been a success, although newer and better methods for the control of Texas fever by destroying the tick which carries it have reduced the disease in domestic cattle to a comparatively small problem.

But the Brahman cattle, while immune to the tick fever, are apparently very susceptible to a much more dangerous disease, the so-called foot-and-mouth disease.

This disease, also called apthous fever or apthous epizootic, most commonly afflicts cows, but may attack horses, dogs, cats and fowls. Unfortunately, human beings are also susceptible.

Numerous epidemics among cows have occurred in this country since 1870, when it was first imported from England. Handling diseased cows or drinking milk from an infected cow will cause the disease in man. On the second day after the exposure fever, headache and itching occur. Five days later blisters form on the hands, the tongue, lips and cheeks. These blisters may later form ulcers. As a rule the disease is a mild one in man, but in children, in severe or neglected cases, the ulcers may become large and painful sores.

While there is no question that this disease is caused by some germ, the exact cause is not known. Strange to say, the United States Department of Agriculture will not even allow its scientific men in the bureau of animal industry to attempt to find the cause. It seems that in Europe some experiments were made, with the result that the infection in some way escaped, and started a new epidemic. Yet no intelligent steps can be taken to prevent or cure this disease, either in animals or men, until the exact cause is known.

Surely there should be some spot in this great country so remote that studies could be safely carried on, and the cause of this disease, dangerous to both man and best, discovered and a method of prevention devised.

for a DeLaval whether you buy one or not—

If your separator doesn't skim clean you are feeding your pigs and chickens enough butter-fat—which is always the equivalent of cash money—to pay for a new clean-skimming De Laval.
We recently heard of a farmer who more than doubled the size of his cream checks by replacing an old separator of another make with a new De Laval. You may not get such an increase, but you will certainly get some when you put a new De Laval to work—enough to pay for it in a comparatively short time.

Bring in your old separator
We will accept it as partial payment for a brand-new, up-to-date De Laval—the separator with the wonderful self-centering bowl, that skims cleaner, runs easier and lasts longer. It pays for itself by saving the fat that other separators waste.

Lame Sickness.

An investigation of the South African disease known as lamziekte, or lame sickness, suggests that it is due to a special plant poison that is generated under abnormal conditions in grasses or other plants that are normally harmless. Its development seems to be associated with unusual weather and soil experiences of which summer drought is important. Through such conditions, wilting would favor the formation of the poison, and this explains the common belief that the disease results from eating wilted plants.

Home of 100 Eagles
Is Desolated by Gun

Cleveland.—Ohio's famous American eagle nest has been vacated for the second time in more than thirty years, while the male bird is en route to his distant winter habitat. His mate was shot down by a hunter and its body is being mounted by a Sandusky taxidermist, preparatory to being placed in the Sandusky high school museum. The nest is at Vermillion, Ohio, and was begun in 1890. It is eighty feet above the ground in a shellbark hickory tree. It is now twelve feet high and more than eight feet in diameter at the top. More than 100 eagles have been hatched and tutored in the nest, residents of Vermillion declare.

Many years ago the mate of the old male eagle was slain and he disappeared for a few weeks, returning with the female bird which recently was shot by John Bovinski, who said it was stealing his chickens.

Fear Not Instinctive

According to a report of experiments at Columbia university, where a hundred normal young folk were subjected to many tests, children are born without fear, and it is only after they are three that they begin to show signs of fear of such things as snakes, fire, the darkness, and so forth. The investigators claim that fear is the result of mental association rather than instinctive caution.

Vanity Cost Life

The Assyrians were a luxurious and beauty-loving people, and both men and women were addicted to an elaborate use of cosmetics. According to history, the last monarch, by name Sardanapalus, "dressed and painted like his women," and it is due to this vanity that he met his death. One of his generals visiting him found him penciling his eyebrows and stabbed him.

Motives

A little thinking shows us that the deeds of kindness we do are effective in proportion to the love we put into them. More depends upon the motive than upon the gift. If the thought be selfish, if we expect compensation, or are guilty of close calculation, the result will be like the attitude of mind which invited it.—Dresser.

Bristles on Head

The African crowned crane derives its name from the curious fan-shaped straw-colored crest of wiry bristles that adorns the back of its head, says Nature Magazine. This crest, with the long neck, bare face, and bushy black feathers of the top of the head, give the bird a striking appearance.

"Mugwump" Defined

Origin of Bachelor

The word "bachelor" is derived from an old word for "cowherd." A bachelor, or cowherd, stood lowest in the social scale, and the term therefore came to be applied to men who had not yet reached the full dignity of manly responsibility.

TOM GIBBONS
JACK DEMPSEY
RETURN BOUT

Will Fight in New York in June for a Title Match—
Sporting World Excited.

By Henry L. Farrell

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

New York, Feb. 4.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, is expected to make terms for a return bout with Tommy Gibbons for the title here in June.

"How can he turn down a half million?" Tex Rickard who has reached an agreement with Gibbons said. "Dempsey wants 50 per cent of the gate receipts and maybe I'll give it to him. He ought to get a half million out of it anyway."

Rickard insists that Dempsey has been talking for effect when hinting he might retire without another fight. "More than a month ago," he said, "I got a telegram from Jack Kearns asking me on what dates I could use the champion. I had to tell him then that I didn't know."

Rickard's present plans are to put Dempsey and Gibbons into the Yankee Stadium on June 2 or June 5 and match the winner with Harry Wills for a date in early September.

He has Wills' under contract now and he also has had Gibbons under option so that all he had to do was to find an opponent and agree on a date with him.

While the terms of the agreement were not made known, it was reported that Gibbons had been offered $150,000 for his end. Rickard feels that the card will draw a million dollars and that he will be able to make a nice piece out of it for himself.

Unless he has seriously made up his mind to get out of the business Dempsey will accept the offer and unless he has more dough than he knows what to do with he will jump at it.

Dempsey said after the fight in Shelby, when he got all the money in Montana and Gibbons got the thanks of the community, that he would give Gibbons another chance at the title and another opportunity to make some real money.

While there are many critics who believe that Gibbons has an excellent chance to win the championship when they meet again, Dempsey feels certain that it will not be a hard fight for him and that it will serve to get him into real condition for the final fight of his career against Harry Wills.

New Rules Cause Snarl
in Paris Traffic Tangle

Paris.—The Paris traffic situation is not solved. Confusion multiplies. Disorder reigns despite studies of police authorities and innumerable suggestions of the press. The multiplicity of rules and regulations are bewildering Parisians as never before.

One-way streets—one way at certain times—have been established. Trucks and other slower vehicles have been forbidden on some boulevards and avenues. Beautiful "stop" signals have been put up at important corners.

A list of six rules for pedestrians has been issued, forbidding them to cross except at regular crossing, walk other than perpendicularly to the curb or stop in the midst of their peregrinations.

Most confusing and French of all is the ukase that on odd days of the month automobiles must be parked on the odd side of the street, on even days of the month on the side with even numbers.

The rules created howls of wrath except from taxi drivers, who are approaching nervous prostration.

AMUSEMENTS

If there are any benighted individuals who are still of the opinion that women are "the weaker sex," we bid them hasten down to the Met theater where "The Female," Betty Compson's latest starring vehicle is now the feature. We guarantee that after they have viewed this Paramount-Sam Wood production they will be willing to admit that they were all wrong.

"The Female" not only successfully proves that the female of the species is decidedly the stronger sex, but it also shows the metamorphosis that love effects who nit happens to strike an illiterate, unsophisticated little Boer girl. The photoplay is based upon Cynthia Stockley's vital story, "Dalla, the Lion Cub" and was adapted to the screen by Agnes Christine Johnston.

Betty Compson has the title role of Dalla, the snarling, savage daughter of an African farmer who becomes a polished, cultured woman of the world. It is a part ideally suited to Miss Compson's temperament and she makes the most of the wide dramatic scope that the characterization affords her. Warner Baxter, as the hero, gives a highly creditable performance. Noah Beery does his usual good work; Dorothy Cumming and Freeman Wood are more than acceptable in their respective parts; as are the rest of the supporting cast.

HARTMAN THEATER

Thurston, the famous magician, comes to the Hartman theater, Columbus, for his 19th annual engagement beginning Monday evening, February 9, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The engagement promises a new program of magic by what is unquestionably the only show of its kind on earth. Thurston needs no introduction to lovers of this time honored style of amusement. He has been distinctly in a class by himself, the head of his profession, since he stepped into the shoes of the great Kellar. The productions which he made in the past in this field of amusement are pointed to with pride and should stand as a guarantee of what may be expected from his this season. Thurston today Thurston today carries more paraphernalia than all of the past and present day magicians combined. His supporting company of capable assistants, of whom are beautiful girls is large as many musical revues and his scenic equipment is of such beauty as to call forth numerous Ah's and Oh's of amazement, surprise and prize.

Church Supper.

The annual Washington birthday supper under the auspices of the Methodist Men's Social club will be held in the social rooms of the M. E. church Thursday evening, February 19, beginning at 5 o'clock.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

(United Press)

Galion, O., Feb. 4.—Bread was selling two cents higher here today, local bakers following the precedent of other Ohio bakers in raising prices.

Norwood, O., Feb. 4, Mrs. Helen Jackson of Toledo, was found guilty of disturbing the peace in Mayor Nolte's court today. Mrs. Jackson's recent anti-Catholic meeting caused a near panic in a public hall here.

Columbus, Feb. 4.—Representative Roberts, Mahoning county, today introduced a bill in the house requiring the state to refuse marriage licenses to members of the white race who seek to marry members of any other race.

Newark, O., Feb. 5.—Lee Sommers, negro, died today as a result of injuries received in the Pure Oil Refinery explosion which yesterday claimed the life of Samuel Taylor.

Columbus, O., Feb. 5.—The motor vehicles committee having recommended its passage the two cent a gallon gasoline tax bill comes to a vote in the house next Tuesday.

The committee refused to write in amendments making the automobile license tag fee $3 plus 70 cents a hundredweight on commercial cars.

While senate Republicans in caucus gave the abstract principal of the proposal their approval they are not bound to support the measure.

Should the governor veto the bill there is speculation as to whether reverse action would be taken by the senate. Rural senators were in favor of passing over the veto but urban senators interfered by calling for adoption of the same policy to all bills vetoed.

Coshocton, O., Feb. 5.—Charles Long, chemist, resumed the witness stand in Grandmother Clara McCurdy's murder trial today.

Long told of finding arsenic in the stomach of Mrs. McCurdy's late husband, William Allison McCurdy, whose death last May resulted in the indictment of his 65 year old widow.

With the crime of McCurdy's death clearly established the prosecution hoped to introduce testimony showing the motive in the alleged murder was to get a part of the $36,000 which McCurdy kept in a strongbox at his home.

SHOWS EARTH'S CRUST IS 1,600,000,000 YEARS OLD

Professor of Geology Uses Radium to Test to Make His Calculations.

Boston.—Using radium as a measure, Professor Alfred C. Lane, professor of geology at Tufts college, has calculated that the approximate age of the earth's crust is 1,600,000,000 years. The experiments he is conducting are based on the disintegration of radium into lead. The chemical decomposition is translated by mathematics into terms of years.

Professor Lane's estimate is based on the age of the oldest radio-active rock he has found. He concedes that buried in the strata of the earth may be other rocks millions of years older than any he has analyzed. The oldest rock he has examined was obtained in the Katanga, Belgian Congo, where the great radium deposits were found recently. These rocks were 1,600,000,000 years old.

"The rate of transformation," Professor Lane pointed out, "is independent of the amount of material, temperature, pressure or any other external condition to which we can subject the radio-active substance."

"Thus, in radium we find that if half of the material present is transformed into lead in a given time, half the remaining quantity will be transformed in a subsequent period of equal duration, and half that amount still left will undergo change in an equal third period."

"It is this 'half-value period' of radium which enables us to calculate time. For example, we have found that it takes 1,700 years for a given quantity of radium to become half lead."

"Scientists found there are 2,700 million millions of atoms to a gram of radium, and that atoms explode at the rate of 35,700 a second, and by a process of division were able to calculate the rate of decomposition."

"Hence, by taking prehistoric rocks and determining the proportion of lead to the radium scientists can mathematically ascertain the age of rocks, assuming, of course, that previously only radium had existed before."

Too Many Have Wrong Theory of Happiness

Happiness was not the direct object of a stoic's life. There is no rule of life contained in the precept that a man should pursue his own happiness. Many men think that they are seeking happiness when they are only seeking the gratification of some particular passion, the strongest that they have, was the contention of Marcus Aurelius. The end of a man is, as already explained, to live conformably to nature, and he will thus obtain happiness, tranquillity of mind and contentment. As a means of living conformably to nature he must study the four chief virtues, each of which has its proper sphere: wisdom, or the knowledge of good and evil; justice, or the giving to every man his due; fortitude, or the enduring of labor and pain, and temperance, which is moderation in all things. By thus living conformably to nature the stoic obtained all that he wished or expected. His reward was in his virtuous life, and he was satisfied with that. Some Greek poet long ago wrote:

For virtue only of all human things
Takes her reward not from the rewards of others.
Virtue herself rewards the toils of

Musician Makes Plea for Melodic Glossary

Reverting to the elementary aspect of the question, I believe that if one were to collect as many as possible of the melodies which have given the greatest happiness to the greatest numbers, it would be feasible to compile from them a glossary of melodic terms such as would insure a melodic result with the same audience under almost any conditions, writes Ewin Evans in the Margin of Music. Then one might take the melodies which have given as much happiness to a more restricted circle, and add a list of terms the use of which was to be recommended only when the presence of that audience could be counted upon.

The composer who travels beyond these accepted glossaries will always be pronounced unmelodious until the new aural habits have taken root. So far as the best "advanced" music is concerned, it is melodious to those who know it intimately, and whose ear is capable of acquiring new habits, and it is unmelodious to those who either do not know it or do not want their habits disturbed.

Aborigines' Tobacco

Australian bushmen show great discrimination in their smoking and are adept at "curing" wild tobacco. The leaves of this plant resemble those of tobacco plants, but are smaller. The leaf gives off a nicotine oil, is pleasant to the taste, and burns well. After the leaf is gathered it is allowed to wilt but not dry. In the fermentation process damp sacks are thrown over the leaves in a warm and shady place for about a week. Then follows the drying in some airy place until the leaf shows a leathery texture. The mild ribs and stalks are now removed and the leaf is arranged in layers and sprinkled with heated treacle, rum, and, if possible, a little saltpeter. The whole is then packed in a box and pressed until the curing is complete.

Gave Up Reform Idea

St. Michael is honored by various orders of chivalry, among them one founded by Louis XI of France, which bore the name of the Order of the Cockle. It derived its name from the cockle shells which ornamented the robes of the knight. A partly religious institution connected with the saint was the Society of Fools, founded at Cleves in 1381. Its amiable object was to prevent the rising generation from adopting bad habits. Knights of the order wore on their mantles an emblem of a fool, his cap and bells. The title of the society suggests that members well realized that to attempt reforming boys and girls was a fool's errand.

Other Side of the Ledger

Jones was sent by his employer, a bookmaker, to collect a betting debt from Smith, who was notorious for his slackness in settling accounts.

After listening to several excuses Jones remarked, "Well, at least let me know on what date I may expect payment."

Smith replied: "Do you take me for a prophet?"

"No," responded Jones. "Up to the present I have always regarded you as a loss!"

Where Days Are Short

North cape, at the extreme north of Norway, is within the Arctic circle, and at that point the sun does not rise for two months in midwinter—that is to say, there is continuous night from November 20 to January 23. On these two days the sun barely shows its upper edge above the horizon. Sunset almost immediately follows sunrise, and these therefore are the shortest days at North cape.

Collins out. This plan is believed impracticable.

Surveyors estimate Collins lies 160 feet from the mouth of the cave. He is sixty feet straight down from the surface. The cave mouth opens from the side of a pit on the slope of a hill. An overhanging rock drops icy water about the mouth. Huge icicles cling to the face of the shelf.

Risking his own life, Roy Hyde wriggled thru the contracting tunnel at 4:30 a. m. Reaching a point 120 feet inward dislocation of the walls prevented further progress he called to Collins.

There was no answer. Again and again Hyde shouted, his voice muffled in the narrow passage. Finally there came to his ears a faint "Oh, Oh!" Collins apparently has lapsed into a coma. He has not been fed for many hours. Weakened by starvation, threatened with pneumonia, he can live only a short time.

Cutting and drilling thru a thick stratum of sand stone rescuers as a last resort will blast their way. Explosives will not be employed, however until all other measures fail.

BUSINESS WOMEN

Evenings for the past few weeks have been very busy in the new Business and Professional Women's Club room over the Citizens' Telephone exchange with Dr. Isa B. Carr, whose office is in the same apartment, as hostess at the meetings.

Last evening the regular meeting was held with an attendance of about thirty members, all of whom were enthusiastic over the results of the efforts that the club has made in furnishing the room.

The program committee had arranged a debate which proved very entertaining and instructive, the subject being, Resolved: "That there are more modern women for present day opportunities than there are new opportunities for the present day women to meet." The affirmative was handled very nicely by Miss Ruth Young and Mrs. Mary Morris, and Misses Ruth Steele and Isabell Bell defended the negative. The chorus by the "Maiden Ladies" of the Club proved to be very much of a success judging by the amusement the rest of the club seemed to derive from it.

Arrangements were completed for the entertainment of Mrs. McBurdy, of Warren, the State Federation President and Miss Olive Jay Wright, of Cleveland, who visit the local club on Friday, the 13th, of this month. A banquet at the Boggs is expected to be the feature of the evening with local club members giving three minute talks. Also some music by members of the club. Near Two Dollar Mark in Chicago

A surprise 6 o'clock dinner, honoring Mr. James C. Haswell's birthday anniversary, was cleverly planned by his little daughter, Mary May, Saturday evening, January 31st. Those present were the employees of The Haswell Steel Furnace Co., Messrs. Harry Timmons, Wm. Kochensperger, Roy Huffer, John More-shausser, Michael Hettinger, Edgar Haswell, W. H. Foresman and Claud Robison. The little Miss was assisted in serving by Dorothy Sampson. During the evening Doris Jameson gave several recitations from Whitcomb Reilly and Mary May and Dorothy Sampson rendered vocal and instrumental piano selections. The company departed at a late hour, having spent an enjoyable evening with their host.

John W. Weaver, plaintiff vs. Myrtle Mounjoy, as Executrix of the estate of Charles Mounjoy, defendant. Civil action for money only, amount claimed $226.84, with interest on $200 thereof at 6% from January 15, 1900. Gerhardt and Walters attorneys for plaintiff.

Worse and Worse.

Misprints are often a source of joy. Few are more pleasing than those enshrined in the ancient yarn—probably concocted—of the public banquet at which a speaker, in proposing the toast of the army, coupled it with the name of a distinguished general, whom he described, according to the printed account of the proceedings, as a "bottle-scarred veteran." In the next issue of the paper in which the libel had appeared a note was inserted expressing regret for a typographical error, and explaining that the words should have been "battle-scarred veteran."—Cornhill Magazine.

Insect pests and particularly the Mexican bean beetle now prevalent in most of Ohio, were reported on by entomologists today. As a whole Ohio has not been seriously affected to date, said Professor D. M. DeLong of the state university, but truck gardeners in southern counties suffered severely from the beetle this past year.

"When we consider it has only been found in the state for two years," Professor DeLong pointed out, "we can realize its economic status if it continues to spread and multiply as it has thus far. Even a hard winter, control experiments indicate, will not kill the beetle. Spraying plants with magnesium arsenate and calcium arsenate, properly diluted, will probably give the best results."

"Joint Ownership in the Home," a talk by Mrs. Ida S. Harrington of the Pennsylvania Farmer, came on today's program for homemakers attending Farmers' week.

The home "cannot be successfully run as a monopoly," Mrs. Harrington said, adding that "Only the joint ownership of a whole family creates that atmosphere that exalts a home above a mere house." Neither husband wife, nor children should control the home, if a family would avoid "homesickness," she concluded.

Another dairy cow, the Holstein, had her day today when the Ohio Holstein-Friesian association met in annual session. Jersey breeders met Wednesday, and Guernsey men on Tuesday. Five other state associations convened for their annual meetings today, including the Buckeye Press association, which takes in editors of virtually all weekly newspapers in Ohio.

Arsenic in Coal.

Poisoning by arsenic in coal, lately announced to the French Academy of Sciences by Charles Richet, seems to be of somewhat frequent occurrence. A serious outbreak of so-called pitch disease occurred at a briquette factory, and the symptoms in many of the employees included cutaneous cancer, which proved fatal in some cases. Chemical analysis showed that arsenic was contained in the pitch used. It was also found in dust of the factory, in the hair of the workers and even in the blood of nearly all, clearly showing that the men were being poisoned. This arsenic must have been derived from the coal supplying the pitch. Certain kinds of coal have been known to contain arsenical pyrites in considerable amount, and investigation brings to notice other workers in coal products who have similar symptoms, such as tar distillers, road asphalters, makers of tarred paper and makers of lampblack.

Lice Are Source of Trouble With Stock

Seriously Hinder Growth if Not Controlled.

Lice are a common source of trouble with young stock and unless kept under control seriously hinder growth. Calves infested with lice do not thrive. To get rid of lice, the quarters must first be thoroughly cleaned and thoroughly disinfected, every crack and corner, with a 5 per cent solution of coal-tar dip. The calves themselves may then be treated by one of the following methods, all of which have been used successfully by competent herdsmen:

"One of the cheapest and most successful methods of combating lice is to brush raw linseed oil over the infested parts of the calf every few days."—Storrs Agricultural Experiment Station Bulletin 96.

"Washing the calf thoroughly with a 2 to 5 per cent coal tar disinfectant, such as zenoleum or creolin, is effective. The washing should be repeated in a week to kill any lice that hatch in the interval. If washing is done in cold weather, the calves must be rubbed with dry cloths and kept blanketed until dry."—Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station Circular 202.

"A good remedy for lice on calves may be made by steeping for four hours four ounces of larkspur (delphinium) in a gallon of boiling water, then straining and applying the liquid to the affected parts. In winter, if the calves are badly infested with lice and it is too cold to wash them, pyrethrum powder may be used to good advantage. As a rule, however, lice powders are not as effective as thoroughly washing or dipping the calves with some disinfectant."—Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station Circular 59.

"When calves become infested with lice, thorough washing of the entire body with a coal tar disinfectant, such as a 2 or 3 per cent solution of zenoleum, creolin or lysol, is recommended. In the absence of any of these, a mixture of lard, one pound, and kerosene, one-half pint, should be smeared on the body. It is well to repeat the bath in a week or ten days to kill lice which hatch in the meantime. In cold weather care must be taken to dry the calves quickly and thoroughly after washing, to prevent chilling."—Nebraska State Dairymen's Association.

How Neglected Orchards Can Be Made to Produce

Neglected and run-down orchards can be restored, in part at least, to normal productivity. The method of restoration will vary necessarily with the condition of the trees and the soil. As a rule, both the trees and the soil need attention, says A. E. Schilleter, extension horticulturist of Clemson college, in a recent statement telling how neglected orchards can be made to stage a productive comeback.

Where pruning has been neglected, the trees are usually full of wood which must be thinned out. This will act as a stimulant to more vigorous wood growth and the storing up of reserve food for fruit-bud formation. The pruning should be done from December to March, and should not be too severe. If a large number of branches has to be removed it is preferable to complete the pruning the second year. The cuts should be made close to the main branches and as clean and smooth as possible.

The land should be plowed as early as possible in the spring, but before plowing, a heavy dressing of well-rotted stable manure should be applied.

Clean Strawberry Patch

Strawberries, one of the earlier garden fruits, will give a better crop if the patch, which has been covered during the winter with a straw mulch, is cleaned out, giving the plants every opportunity to grow. They need the light and the warm sun encourages them to a very marked extent. If they remain covered the plants may become stunted, and if they bear fruit it may be much later and smaller than if the patch had been cleaned.

FARM FACTS

Rye straw is not advised for poultry house litter because of the possible presence of ergot.

It takes about six pounds of seed corn to plant an acre. This means about sixteen ears for each acre to be planted.

Manure exposed to the weather in loose, shallow piles for a few months may lose more than half of its fertilizing value through fermentation and leaching.

Rotted wood, such as is to be found in old woods where fallen trees and old stumps have rotted, is said to be excellent to scatter to a depth of an inch or more in the flower bed. Fewer weeds will grow in soil covered with rotted wood.

Spring showers and sunshine encourage the multiplication of the cabbage and other vegetable worms. Unless they are promptly checked they will have accomplished their purpose before the season is well advanced. Careful inspection every few days is advisable, if a wormless crop is to be had.

Anne and Her Ancestors

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

IF ANNE had not skimped with all her might during the winter she could not have had her trip to England and the Wembley exhibition. And if she hadn't got to Wembley, she never would have met Tom Everett, who got her a sweepstake ticket.

And little Anne Severn, without family or ties of any kind, won some forty thousand pounds, or in the coinage of her own land, about two hundred thousand dollars.

It took Anne about ten days to settle down and realize that she was no longer a skimping, hard-worked stenographer. She was a wealthy young lady, whose future, with clear-headed investment, was most decidedly assured.

Anne was an orphan, and didn't even know who her parents had been, and she decided at once that she would acquire some ancestors before returning home. She would seek in the antique shops for paintings, old family furniture and a romantic history, and return to New York well-equipped to enter society.

Anne was more than successful among the junk dealers. She found a fine old gentleman smiling down at her from a musty canvas. That was to be father. In another room behind some old bedsteads she discovered mother, a jolly looking soul who, if Anne had but known it, wore the jewelry of a decade before father's time. That was a small matter to Anne. She found Uncle Henry, Aunt Susie and many cousins of brave deeds. And lastly, she found brother. Anne loved brother. He was a fine young soldier in a queer wee cap, with checked edge and streamers, a tiny ribbon across his breast. Anne swept away a swiftly arrived tear as she looked at the bonnie face. She believed the dealer's tale that the young man had fallen in the great war.

Anne was lucky in her return voyage to the States in becoming fast friends with Mrs. Vandercup, who introduced her later to her social set in New York. Anne herself was as dainty as a bit of the old Chelsea china she had picked up to help adorn the old mansion she purchased in the East Seventies. Anne's ancestors arrived in short time and were hung on the walls in her "portrait room."

Mrs. Vandercup kindly managed the first dinner that Anne gave, and it was a marked success. Anne, living in a seeming romance, sparkled and chatted with this new-found coterie of well-bred friends and enjoyed herself hugely.

"Anne, dear," suggested Mrs. Vandercup, when most of the guests were joyfully dancing, "that young Mr. Warden, the artist, would love to see your portrait gallery; he has asked me to tell you."

Anne blushed swiftly. She had taken an immediate liking to the red-haired Briton, with his artistic Van Dyke beard, that was so apparently worn to conceal a great scar that lay across his cheek.

Warden followed her into the portrait gallery and listened to her tales so carefully thought out about each old painting. His eyes more often lingered on dainty Anne than on the ancestors. He was realizing that Anne was the most lovely bit of womanhood he had met during his life in New York.

It was while she was telling him about her dear brother who fell in the war that Warden came to his senses. His eyes opened wide as he looked at the portrait.

"He was in the Artist's Rifles," Anne was saying of the young officer of the portrait, who was wearing the Royal Scot's uniform, "and he won the Victoria cross," she added, and Warden bit his lips viciously. The bar was the Military cross, but to Anne it was all the same. She finished her recital, and was not exactly conscious of Warden's peculiar silence.

"Miss Severn," he said finally, "can I come and have a cup of tea with you tomorrow? I have lots to tell you—and I want to show you some of my own ancestors."

Anne never forgot his thoughtfulness in not speaking that night. It might have spoiled her dinner party. Warden arrived punctually the next day, and Anne's heart fluttered as she felt the close grip of his hand.

"Miss Severn," he began softly when they were seated, "you are not to think me a conceited idiot if I show you my own photograph first." He drew from his pocket a small picture and held it laughingly out.

Anne looked at it, blushed furiously, then burst out laughing.

The photograph was the small one from which Anne's portrait of her brother had been painted.

"I'm glad, so very glad you did not fall—in battle," she said with a sincerity so great as to cause Warden's heart to jump a beat.

"You are just an adorable fraud," he said. "We lost every penny we had, sold our possessions, and I came here to earn my way. It is all very simple, isn't it? Meantime let me put you quite straight about the Victoria cross and the Military cross."

"I will let you do what you will," Anne told him, her eyes big pools of trust, "because my family are all on canvas. It is not so satisfactory."

"Brother will have to come to life—as somebody else then," Warden told her, and Anne agreed with a shy glance.

Affinities.

Jennie had several dolls, but she liked to dress the kitten in the dolls' clothes and carry it around, "Cause," she explained, "her's alive and we have some sympathy together."

Miss Dorinda Dodd

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

"DEAR Captain," read the letter, "I now take my pen in hand to tell you that I am going to California to keep house for my brother, so that I cannot work for you any longer. He needs me, so I cannot wait until you come home from this trip. Dorinda Dodd will take my place as your housekeeper, and you can change if neither one of you please the other. Yours respectfully, Ellen Smith."

"Dorinda Dodd! Sufferin' fish!" groaned young Captain Clark, as he put the letter away and leaned against the rail of his fine schooner Breeze, a large three-masted vessel that raced through deep seas. "Think of going home and not seeing Ellen Smith at the helm. Is Dorinda Dodd the only woman without a job in Fairport?"

He asked himself this question many times as the Breeze neared New York. They touched at the big city and took a Fairport man home with them. Jabez Case offended the captain before the ship had left the East river.

"I hear Dorinda Dodd's going to keep house for you," gossiped Jabez lazily.

"Until I can turn around and find someone else," said the captain, a frown on his handsome bronzed face.

"Find someone else! What's the matter with Dorinda Dodd?" Jabez fairly squeaked his surprise. "She makes the best apple pies in Fairport."

The captain hesitated. "That may be, and apple pie is my favorite, but I couldn't stand being talked to death by Dorinda."

"Talked to death?" repeated the stupefied Jabez.

"I said it."

Jabez became silent. He watched the captain's gloomy face as he stood by the wheel. They were entering the sound and the navigation through Hell Gate required the captain's close attention. Once Jabez slapped his knee just as though he had made a delightful discovery.

"Folks are gossiping already, Bill—you know old Dorinda Dodd always wanted to get married!"

"Don't be a fool, Jabez," snapped Capt. Bill Clark.

"The Breeze is in port!" the word flew around the village of Fairport, but no one had an opportunity to have a word with the captain, who went ashore at once and took a short cut across the bluffs to his little white home on the hill. He had been born and raised there, and it pleased him to live in the house that was so eloquent of his mother and father, dead these five years past. There were many houses whose doors opened gladly to receive the handsome young master of the Breeze, and many a fair damsel set her cap for him, but he was a shy sailorman whose only love was his ship. Thus far he had escaped. Ellen Smith had always made a pleasant home for him. The very notion of that disagreeable Dorinda Dodd, with her morose face and bony hands always around, depressed him. Ellen had been fat and florid and jolly. "Oh, confound the women," he groaned as he entered the little front yard, gay with summer flowers all blowing in the wind.

"The old lady likes posies," he grudgingly admitted. He entered the front door and stood in the familiar entry, with bare head. It was a little tribute that he always paid to his dear ones. Then he hung his hat on the deer's antlers, and looked into the parlor. Everything was in its accustomed place, and immaculately clean. The small front windows were open and the scent of cinnamon roses filled the room. His throat tightened—memory seemed so insistent. He almost sensed the presence of his mother. He left hastily, passed through the quaint dining room, and sought the kitchen—and Dorinda Dodd.

There was a delicious fragrance of baking cake; on a side table were all the evidences of molasses cookies to come, but no Dorinda Dodd.

"Oh, Miss Dorinda!" he sang lustily, cheered for the moment by the comfort of his home, and with the words scarcely uttered out of the pantry stepped a woman.

"It must be Captain Clark," she extended a plump capable hand. "Welcome home."

"Thank you, ma'am. I was expecting to see Miss Dorinda Dodd here, so I just sang out," he explained.

"Oh—why, I am Dorinda Dodd!" He stared at her doubtfully. "I was expecting an elderly lady—I went to school to her once upon a time."

"That was father's sister—and Aunt Dorinda died last winter, poor dear. I am sorry that you are disappointed."

"Disappointed?" he roared. "Why should I be disappointed?" He admired the pretty light blue dress she wore and the way the hair curled in the nape of her pretty neck. Send her away? He hoped nothing would happen to tempt her to leave his abode. She was a little more than thirty, and he was a sober thirty-six. And he was home for the summer!

When he was ready to sail on his next long voyage, he met Jabez Case on the street. "How is Miss Dorinda, Billy?" asked Jabez.

Capt. Billy Clark grinned happily. "There isn't any Miss Dorinda Dodd now, Jabez—it's Dorinda Clark, and we're off on our honeymoon."

CHRIST'S INTERCESSORY PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—John 17:1-26.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are."—John 17:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Praying for His Friends.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Jesus Prayed For.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christ's Prayer for His Disciples.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Intercessory Prayer.

I. His Prayer for Himself (vv. 1-5). Fully conscious that the hour of His crucifixion was at hand He prayed to the Father saying, "Glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify Thee." His coming into the world had as its supreme mission the glorification of the Father. In order that the Father might be glorified it was necessary that the Son should be glorified.

1. To Him Had Been Given the Power to Give Eternal Life to God's Chosen Ones (vv. 2, 8). Eternal life is knowledge of and a right relation to the true God and Jesus Christ. Thus we see that eternal life is a relationship and not an entity.

2. He Declared That He Had Finished the Work Committed unto Him (v. 4). The definite work which He came to do was to give eternal life to the chosen of God.

II. His Prayer for His Immediate Disciples (vv. 6-19).

1. Their Preservation (vv. 9-16). He did not pray that they would be taken out of the world but that they might be kept from the Evil One. It is not the divine will that we go to heaven at once when we believe because:

(1) Christ needs our ministry. Those who have been made partakers of the divine life are His representatives in the world.

(2) We need His grace strengthened and developed in us. Heaven is a prepared place and only those who have been prepared for it can be admitted into it.

(3) The world needs us. Christ declares that the disciples are the light of the world, the salt of the earth (Matt. 5:16). Only as the light of the Lord shines forth through the disciples can the people in the world find their way.

2. Their Sanctification (vv. 17-19).

(1) Sanctify means: First, to set apart; that means then that the disciples were to be set apart to do the specific work of representing Christ; second, to cleanse; those who are set apart as His representatives need the special cleansing grace to make them vessels fit for the Master's use.

(2) The instrument used (v. 17). They were to be sanctified through God's truth. God's truth is His Word.

(3) The purpose (v. 18). They were sanctified in order that they might be qualified for His service in the world.

(4) Jesus' own sanctification was for that purpose (v. 19). He is the grand example.

III. His Prayer for His Future Disciples (vv. 20-26).

1. Their Unification (vv. 20-23). His great concern was that all believers should be united.

(1) The grand pattern of this spiritual union is the union that exists between the Father and the Son (v. 21).

(2) The incentive making possible this union (v. 22). The vision of the glory of God in Christ (II Cor. 3:18) is the grand incentive which unites the believers.

(3) The purpose (v. 23). The supreme objective in the unification of the believers is to convince the world that God sent Jesus Christ to save it.

2. Their Glorification (vv. 24-26). The disciple of Christ enjoys fellowship with the Father and the Son and fellowship with his fellow believer, but he also looks forward to the time when he shall be glorified.

(1) "I will that they be with Me where I am" (v. 24). There is a present glory enjoyed by believers.

(a) They are now children of God, although it does not yet appear what they shall be.

(b) They now possess eternal life and therefore shall never perish. While there is the present glory, Jesus wants His disciples to be with Him in Heaven. He said, "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." We can reverently say that unless the believer is taken to Heaven Christ will be lonely.

(2) "Behold my glory" (v. 24). The believer shall share the ineffable glory of Christ (I John 3:1-3).

The Master-Word

The master-word of Christianity is love.

Charity

A bone to the dog is not charity. Charity is the bone shared with the dog when you are just as hungry as the dog.

Never Be Afraid

Never be afraid of giving up your best—and God will give you His better.

Men's muscles move better when their souls are making merry music.

SPAIN KIDNAPED HIM

"One year in h—l" is the way Harold Ewing, Wichita, Kans., nineteen, describes his year with the Spanish forces in Morocco. He was shanghaied in Hamburg, Germany, just before he was to have sailed for Buenos Aires. He claims the Spanish vice consul and another man, posing as shipping agents, forced him and several of his companions to leave the boat. Under guard they were sent to Don Riffen, Spanish Morocco, to a training camp. They were imprisoned for 45 days after an attempted escape. Following their release, Ewing and his companions were sent to Uad Lau and went under fire. Ewing was wounded and sent to Spanish hospitals three times. He escaped from the Moors three times after being captured. In October he made his way to Genoa, Italy, where he placed his case in the hands of an American consul.

Typewriter Music

In order to get the proper effect of the various sounds when shrapnel breaks and scatters, a French soldier, who has composed a new symphony entitled "At the Front," has called for the use of 20 typewriters in the orchestra alongside the musical instruments.

Case for the S. P. C. C.

The tightest man in the world is the Scotchman who shot off a pistol outside his house on Christmas eve and then came in and told the children that Santa Claus had committed suicide—Pelican.

Extreme in Pointed Shoes

In the reign of Edward II of England, 1307-1327, the dandies wore shoes whose pointed toes were so long that they had to be caught up and fastened to the knees with ribbons or chains.

Natural Pillows.

The pollack tree provides the natives of British Honduras with splendid material for pillows and mattresses. It is common soft wood growth, with a large pear-shaped fruit, which has a hard shell, changing to almost black when ripe, and containing a short staple brown fluff or silk fiber.

REAL ECONOMY IN BETTER

WALL PAPER

Good wall paper is the real thought of true economy. It is within the reach of every home owner. The total added expense of decorating a room with better grades is only the small additional cost of paper. The labor charge remains the same, hence the investment is small compared with the ultimate results. Be mindful of the fact that nothing stands out more conspicuously than wall decorations. Wall paper is the background and support of all the furnishings. It is the final touch in beautifying a home. Select the better grades and you profit both in beauty and economy.

STRANGE BOTTLE OF STRYCHNINE AT DISPENSARY.

Columbus, O. Jan. 5 (United Press) Three hundred grains of strychnine were found in a bottle on an open shelf in the pharmacy department at Ohio university today giving the first tangible clue to the "poison pill" mystery under investigation by the police.

"The bottle is entirely strange to us," said Dean Clair A. Dye, of the pharmacy department, in announcing the discovery.

"I never saw it before. It was a different type than the ones used here. The bottle's capacity was 437½ grains but all except 300 grains had been taken out."

Dean Dye said the bottle was labeled "strychnine" written in long hand.

It was on an upper shelf behind a row of other bottles containing harmless drugs.

"How it got there is a mystery to me," the dean said. "I came upon it unexpectedly just as I was completing my inventory of the department."

Police declared the discovery confirmed their theory that the deadly poison which has claimed the lives of two students was brought in from the outside with criminal intent.

When John R. King, county prosecutor, learned of the bottle's appearance he said the investigation had been given "a great start" and that it would now narrow to determining the identity of the party responsible for mixing the poison with aspirin and quinine in the university dispensary.

Detectives were busy interviewing several students who were made ill by strychnine given them in capsules as quinine.

Questioning of students in the pharmacy department got under way shortly before noon. The first few students to come before authorities told of making capsules in the laboratory but all said the drugs were passed out to them under the rigid supervision of their professors.

Front Yards in City Only for the Wealthy

Nowhere else in the world is the possession of a front yard or a garden so expensive a luxury as on Manhattan Island. Every square foot of space on the streets of the city has a definite if exaggerated value. A flower bed or a grass plot, however small, represents a considerable investment. Only a few wealthy men in New York can afford such a luxury, while in the smaller cities a side yard with a grass plot and a garden is within the reach of those of moderate means.

A city lot on Fifth avenue today is worth on an average of $125,000, often much more. A few New Yorkers still appreciate a small grass plot so highly that they are willing to invest a fortune for a narrow strip of green. To enlarge one's side yard or front yard in Manhattan beyond a narrow strip requires enormous wealth. There are several side or front yards in New York which would readily bring $1,000,000. Would these properties be thrown upon the market there would be countless customers bidding for them.

A few such grass plots are still to be found on busy streets, including Fifth and Madison avenues, below Forty-second street. They are slowly but surely being surrounded by ramparts of towering office or loft buildings or great hotels or apartment houses. There are several such gardens on upper Fifth avenue. It is not generally known that a number of these oases are hidden away behind high garden walls.

When one of these priceless bits of land becomes a garden no trouble or expense is spared, as a rule, to beautify it. The best talent in landscape gardening is often engaged for the work. Surprising results are often obtained in limited space. An effect of space is gained by covering the surrounding walls to a considerable height with trellises and vines. Rare flowers are planted and made to grow by careful cultivation. The diminutive gardens are sometimes museums of beautiful statues with rare fragments of antique sculpture of fabulous value.—New York Herald-Tribune.

Tips for the Household

Don't guess—measure. Many a recipe has failed because a "level" cup was "heaping."

Try using a tablespoon or two of some of the chills and relishes in the belted salad dressing.

Aunt Ada's Axioms: Children must have a square deal if they are expected to deal squarely.

The apple a day may sometimes be in a salad. Sweet onion, cabbage or celery may be used with the apple.

Don't hold your breath and fear the worst when you put your cake in the oven. Use a thermometer and be certain.

Molasses is a wholesome sweet, richer in iron than sugar, so let's have gingerbread and an old-fashioned Indian pudding occasionally.

The answers to two troublesome questions on table service are that the bread and butter plates are removed before the salad course and plum pudding is served with a fork.—Bulletin New York State College of Agriculture.

San Spots Not to Blame

Fear that earthquakes may result from the accumulation of spots on the sun is without scientific basis, according to W. F. Meyer, associate professor of astrophysics at the University of California, says an Associated Press dispatch from Berkeley, Calif.

The sun spots, which have been causing much speculation lately, are under continual observation at the university and at other observatories.

Professor Meyer said: "Although these spots are constantly coming together and breaking up to form new ones, the total area is not increasing to any appreciable amount. As far as we know, they have nothing to do with cyclones on the earth or with our weather conditions in any respect. The only noticeable effect is on the auroral displays at the pole and in causing slight interference with telegraphy."

Fight Rules Established

"How are the dances out your way these days, Mr. Johnson?" asked the able editor of the Tumbler-Torch of Liberty and Tocsin of the Times.

"Well, I don't prezisely know whether we've improved 'em or not," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "But, anyhow, we've made a rule that there shan't be no fighting till after 11 o'clock, unless it's about something mighty special or with fellers that have come over from Slippery Slap, and so on, looking for trouble."—Kansas City Star.

Boxing Cat Floors Foes

"Buddie" is the name of a boxing cat owned by Ella J. Kennedy of Penacook, N. H. He is a white feline with tiger stripes and he stands like a prize fighter when attacked by another of his kind or a combative dog. In fighting other cats Buddie invariably knocks them over backward before "lighting into" them with his claws and teeth. Likewise he enjoys boxing with his human friends, and one of his tricks is to extinguish a lighted match with a well-directed left punch.

APES TERRORIZE SIERRA LEONE

British Hunters End Killings Charged to Bewitched Animals.

London.—Capt. W. B. Stanley, British commissioner of the southern province of Sierra Leone, when in London on leave, told a London Chronicle representative of his single-handed fight against the ingrained mysticism of the East.

"Shortly after my arrival at Sierra Leone," he said, "I found the country scared by mysterious deaths and maimings. Children, in particular, vanished frequently and were found dreadfully mangled. Sometimes women were waylaid in the bush. They were found bitten to death and torn to pieces.

"The trouble was that the natives rushed up these atrocities and the government officials, when endeavoring to investigate them, met with a baffling secrecy. The natives declared that the deaths were due to weird creatures in the forests with the form and malignity of apes, but invested with the spirit of men with magic powers. The government officials believed they were caused by common murderers clothed in animal skins.

Rites of the Leopard Men.

"Now, I had an idea that both sides were wrong, for I loved hunting and knew the ways of apes. Sierra Leone had been from time immemorial the haunt of 'leopardism.' Witchmen, anxious to gain power over the people and jealous of British prestige, banded themselves together in secret societies—notably those of the Leopard.

"Clad in leopard skins and wearing iron claws attached to their hands, the Leopard men performed weird rites whose imagined details thrilled the minds of the common natives. The Leopard men were believed to be able to project their spirit into the bodies of real bush-leopards and to kill human beings.

"Now, the spasm of terrorism that I found in existence in my province was due to ape-mauling, and the history of the leopards at once suggested human ape-fiends to the popular mind.

"The witch doctors thrived on the lack of understanding between natives and officials, and fostered it for political motives.

Apes the Real Offenders.

"So I set traps, had them watched by natives, and organized supplies of arms and ammunition.

"Then we got our first brute. I was right, and I made sure the evidence was served up to the natives. The murderous creature was neither man nor spirit. It was simply an ape-meat right through—such as you see in a zoo, but enormously bigger and very savage.

"I kept the system going, and apes were shot or trapped regularly. Before long the government began to issue ammunition for specific use against marauding apes.

"The immediate influence on British prestige was marked. The natives realized that the government was out to help them, and that all the mumbo-jumbo of the witch-doctors was spook.

"Even the old-established cult of Leopardism began to tremble, especially when we shot a leopard that had killed twenty-four natives, and that they believed to be an unsalvageable and superhuman leopard-man.

"The medicine men were very 'sick,' and we have been the best of friends with the natives ever since. The exploding of the ape-man superstition did it all."

Captain Stanley's mascot is the skull of a great ape he shot. Some of the roughest Sierra Leone apes weigh 140 pounds, have a 6-foot arm span and a 39-inch chest. The only specimen of this kind believed ever to have been taken is in the South Kensington museum.

Buried in Mummy Fashion at Cost of About $3,000

St. Louis.—The last wish of Joseph Marconnot, sixty-four, who died in a hospital here December 26 last, that his body be preserved after the fashion of the mummies of Egypt, was granted with interment here recently. Three thousand dollars out of the $70,000 estate left by Marconnot was set aside for this purpose. The body was inclosed in a casket of bronze, with a class-covered aperture through which the face could be seen. Bronze was decided upon for its endurance qualities after consideration of several other metals.

Large Family

Columbia, Ky.—When the family meal is served in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Corlia Bryant of this county, 20 chairs are placed around the table. Bryant is fifty and Mrs. Bryant forty. They have been married 30 years and have had 19 children, 18 of whom are living at home. One is dead. The oldest child is twenty-six and the youngest a year old.

Too Many Men

Warsaw.—Polish railroads are expensive to operate because of the large number of employees. This averages 13 for each kilometer of track, as against seven men in France and five in the United States. It is being pointed out by experts that Poland could save 50,000 railroad employees a year by saving $200,000,000 a year.

YOUTHFUL DEPRAVITY

Srown By Seven Year Old School Girl of Los Angeles, Calif.

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.—(U. P.)—

Confessing with smiling assurance that she had caused the death of her twin sisters and a woman, Alsa Thompson, 7 year old school girl, was being examined by psychiatrists today while police sought to verify or disprove her story.

The girl said she killed her baby sisters two years ago while residing in Dauphin, Manitoba, Canada, by feeding them ground glass. Later here in Los Angeles she gave a Mrs. Pratt, with whom she was living, rat poison and the woman died.

Friends of the child's parents verified the fact that the twins and Mrs. Pratt died mysteriously.

"I guess I did it because I was so mean," Alsa explained. "I liked to see it hurt them."

Auburn, N. Y., Feb. 3.—(U. P.)—

Fire destroyed Morgan Hall, oldest building on the campus at Wells College, Aurora, today. No one was in the building when the fire broke out.

Lack of water pressure hampered the college and Aurora fire departments when they arrived and by the time pressure was obtained the blaze had such a start that the structure burned to the ground.

It was used for music class rooms, classes in biology, history and art department and had a lecture hall used for general purposes. One piano was the only thing saved.

Foolish Fad of Idie Rich.

At one time snail racing was a great fad in Austria. Vienna had a fashionable snail racing club, where fortunes were frequently wagered on the ridiculous contests. Careful records of the time taken by the winning snail to crawl around the miniature race course were kept, in order that contestants might be properly handicapped in subsequent matches.
